

HE MISUNDERSTOOD THE TRAIN ORDERS

FATAL TRAIN WRECK NEAR EMPORIA, KANSAS

Many Killed and Injured—Fast Express and Mail Trains on the Santa Fe Road, in Collision—Mr. Bryan a Passenger—Praised for His Coolness and Bravery.

Emporia, Kas., Sept. 9.—Three miles east of this city Wednesday night occurred one of the worst wrecks in the history of the Santa Fe road. At least twelve men are killed and ten or twelve badly wounded.

The wreck was a collision between the fast mail going east and the Mexico and California train going west. The Mexico and California train was pulled by two engines, and when they struck the fast mail all three of the engines exploded and tore a hole in the track so deep that the smoking car of the west-bound train went on top of the wreck of the three engines and two mail cars and balanced there without turning over.

Those in the car in escaping through the windows came very near turning the car over, in which event the list of fatalities would have been more terrible, as this car soon caught fire from the exploded engines underneath it and burned to ashes in no time. In jumping out the windows some one or two fell through the rifts of the wreck underneath and it is impossible to tell whether they escaped or were burned to death.

The west-bound train carried seven or eight coaches because of the large number who had gone to Burlingame to hear William J. Bryan. Everybody was gay and happy. The distinguished advocate of bimetalism was himself on the train, but was in the rear car, probably 400 feet from where the wreck occurred. He said it did not jar very much there. Mr. Bryan was one of the busiest men in the crowd of rescuers. He helped to go through the wreck, braving every danger. He helped to carry out every dead and wounded man and paid the greatest attention to their care.

Mr. Bryan went into the fast-mail car, the end of which was burning, and secured for a dying man a desired drink of water. He went into a car and brought out a cushion seat to make a pillow for another dying man. He was everywhere and assisting everybody, and his head was cool during the terrible scenes.

The dead are: JIM BRENNAN, engineer, Topeka. NATE HOLLISTER, fireman, Topeka.

J. F. SOURS, Kansas City, express messenger. BILL FRISBY, engineer. R. A. DORAN, postal clerk, Emporia.

MAN UNKNOWN, tramp. GONZALES, fireman of engine of west-bound train.

BRAKEMAN, name not known, of 623 Locust street, Topeka, Kas.

The seriously injured are: Claud Holliday, Lawrence, express messenger; both legs broken and hurt internally.

D. C. Erter, 2220 Charlotte street, Kansas City, express messenger; legs broken and badly injured internally. John Dagan, Topeka; face badly mashed and head hurt.

J. T. Butler, county attorney of Chase county; hip broken and badly injured otherwise.

William F. Jones, 500 Deguerre avenue, Kansas City, Kas.; leg and arms broken, face cut and back badly injured.

B. P. Petrick, Atchison, salesman; forehead badly bruised, neck and shoulder sprained.

Phm Schier, 1512 Lydia avenue, Kansas City; hip badly bruised but not seriously hurt.

C. A. Van Fleit, brakeman, Kansas City; badly hurt, but not fatal. William Patrick, Kansas City; leg and arm broken.

C. D. Adams, City of Mexico; hurt, but not seriously. Mike Sweeney, Gainesville, Tex.; back hurt, but not badly.

Ben Walters of St. Joseph, Mo., a fireman on the east-bound train, is missing.

Eagan, passenger; unknown.

The wreck was caused by the mis-carriage of orders from the trainmaster. The conductor of the east-bound train was ordered at Emporia to meet and pass the west-bound at Lang, seven miles east. An order sent to Lang to the conductor of the west-bound for him to wait there was not delivered, he supposing he was to pass at Emporia. Each train was hurrying, one to Emporia, the other to Lang, and met at full speed on the main line.

MONEY COMMISSION.

Chairman Hanna of the Indianapolis Convention Acts.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 9.—H. H. Hanna of the executive committee of the national monetary convention that met in this city last January, Wednesday named nine of the eleven men who will form the monetary commission for the preparation of a bill to be submitted to congress. They are: George P. Edmunds, Vermont; Chas. S. Fairchild, New York; Stuyvesant Fish, New York; Stewart Patterson, Pennsylvania; T. G. Bush, Alabama; J. W. Fries, North Carolina; W. B. Dean, Minnesota; George E. Leighton, Missouri; Robert S. Taylor, Indiana.

When finally completed the commission will be made up of eleven men. The entire number had been agreed upon when the point was raised in some quarters that the professional economists had been passed by. It seems probable now that when the two additional members are announced they will prove to be economists of note. Among the men under consideration are Horace White, David A. Wells, Edward Atkinson, Prof. Sumner, Prof. Taussig, and Prof. J. L. Laughlin of Chicago.

It is announced that the commission will immediately go about the work of preparing a bill which congress will be asked to consider.

Train Robbers Get Scared.

Lathrop, Cal., Sept. 9.—The Southern Pacific express train No. 17 from San Francisco to Los Angeles was held up at a switch near Morano at 9 o'clock Wednesday evening. Elaborate preparations had been made by the robbers, who had piled ten ties across the track and had set the pile on fire. As the train slowed up the robbers, who were standing beside a fence near the track, fired five shots at the trainmen. A tramp riding on top of the baggage car was shot in the hip, being the only person wounded. Two deputy sheriffs, who happened to be on the train, tried to return the fire, but the robbers, becoming frightened, ran across the fields in the direction of the San Joaquin river without making any further attempt to rob the train.

MINERS MAY NOT YIELD TO BOSSES

DIFFICULTIES IN THE WAY OF STRIKE SETTLEMENT.

Will Demand the Top Rate—Indiana Seems to Hold the Balance of Power at the Columbus Convention, and a Settlement May Be Prevented By a Pledge

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 9.—The convention of miners called to discuss the two propositions submitted as a result of the joint conference of last week was as well attended Wednesday as President Rathford expected. A faction led by National President Rathford and Pittsburg President Dolan favors the proposed compromise, but a large delegation from various districts come with instructions to stand firm for the 69-cent rate demanded when the strike was started.

Secretary Warner of the Pittsburg district denies that 90 per cent of the delegates from that section will hold out for 69 cents, and claims a large majority is in favor of resumption at 65 cents. President Knight and Secretary Kennedy of Indiana believe that the Indiana delegates will not favor resumption, owing to peculiar conditions which exist in that territory. President Carson of Illinois is sure that the northern Illinois miners will not accept the rate proposed, but was unable to say what stand the delegates will take.

The most important action of the convention was in determining the basis of representation. Some of the delegates wanted a rule that no delegate should be allowed to cast more than six votes. This, if adopted, it is claimed, would have settled the question of the acceptance of the strike settlement very quickly. It was the sentiment of the convention, however, that representation should be fixed so that all miners should have a voice in the settlement. Accordingly it was decided that one vote should be cast for every 100 miners represented. This makes the votes to be cast by each state about as follows: Western Pennsylvania, 230; Ohio, 280; West Virginia, 110; Indiana, 69, and Illinois, 200.

The Illinois vote, which will be cast against the acceptance of the operators' proposition, will about offset the vote of western Pennsylvania (Pittsburg district). The vote of Ohio is about equally divided on the proposition; also the West Virginia vote. This practically leaves the balance of power in the hands of the Indiana delegates. Should they vote with Illinois, which some of the delegates say they have instructions to do, by inference, if not by direct language, the proposed settlement will undoubtedly be defeated.

The Indiana delegates say they are instructed not to vote in favor of the operators' proposition unless a general settlement will be effected by it. In view of the position of the Illinois miners they do not see their way clear to vote to accept the proposition. It develops that the vote of the Pittsburg district will not be maintained in favor of accepting the settlement, as some of the delegates have stated openly they would not vote for it. The leaders of the miners are doing some quiet missionary work and have hopes that they will be able to turn the tide in favor of a settlement. To-day the members of the national executive board will be heard by the convention, and as they all strongly indorse the settlement their views may have considerable weight with the delegates.

Small Iowa Strike Settled.

Du Bois, Pa., Sept. 9.—The striking miners of the Clearfield and Jefferson Coal Mining company had a meeting, and received the report of the committee which had conferred with General Manager Robinson. Sons of Veterans Convene.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 9.—Nearly all the states were represented in the reception that opened the sixteenth national encampment of the Sons of Veterans. The Daughters are here, too, and at the reception were more conspicuous than the Sons. James Lewis Rake of Reading, Pa., the commander in chief, arrived on a special train Wednesday afternoon. He was accompanied by many of the eastern delegates and at Cincinnati was joined by a large number of citizens, who are presenting the claims of that city for the next meeting place.

SOME ARE OPPOSED TO ANNEXATION

NATIVE HAWAIIANS TAKE A HAND IN THE FIGHT.

Mass Meeting to Be Held—Elaborate Scheme Arranged to Influence United States Senators Against the Ratification of Treaty—Ex-Queen is Involved.

Honolulu, Sept. 1, via Victoria, B. C., Sept. 9.—The annexationists are much worried over an alleged attempt on the part of the anti-annexationists to influence Senators Morgan and Quay, who are expected to arrive here soon on a tour of investigation. They say that Senators White of California and Thurston of Nebraska, who will lead the fight against annexation in congress this winter, will also visit Hawaii and attend the mass-meeting of natives which, it is alleged by the annexationists, has been called for the purpose of convincing the senators that the natives bitterly oppose annexation.

It is stated that Senators White and Thurston will superintend the drafting of a monster petition to congress in which the Hawaiians will assert that the government was torn from them through the action of American Minister Stevens. It is also alleged that the mass-meeting will be conducted entirely by Hawaiians and will be made as dramatic as possible. The idea is to work upon the sympathies of Senator Morgan, and to persuade him, if possible, that the natives have been deprived of lands and power by a handful of rich and powerful whites, backed by a treacherous American minister.

It is believed that the ex-queen may arrive on the same steamer as the senators, and that she will address the people at the mass-meeting.

The Supreme court has decided that the income tax law passed by the last session of the Hawaiian legislature is constitutional.

President Dole has issued a proclamation calling the senate to meet in special session on Sept. 8, instead of Sept. 14, as previously announced. After the annexation treaty is ratified the senate will adjourn until the regular session.

An attempt to bring negro laborers to this country has failed. The matter was referred to some southern senators for an opinion. The southerners, including Senator Morgan, object to any attempt to take their labor from them.

New Embargo on Cattle.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 9.—Pursuant to the request of the state board of live stock commissioners, the governor has issued a proclamation prohibiting the importation of any cattle from the states of Tennessee and Arkansas into the state of Illinois, except in accordance with the regulations prescribed by the board for the handling of southern cattle. This proclamation is an amendment to the proclamation of the governor issued April 8, 1897, and simply enlarges the Texas fever district by including all of the territory within the above states.

Tobacco Seized at Colon.

Colon, Sept. 3.—The customs authorities have seized twenty cases of tobacco forwarded here by the steamer Finance, Captain Daly, from New York, August 30, which were down on the manifest as lard. The duty on the tobacco is $1,000, or twice the value of the tobacco itself. August 27 six cases invoiced as "lard" and "prints" landed here from the steamer Alliance, from New York, were found upon examination by the customs officials to contain tobacco of excellent quality.

Weaving Industry in Japan.

Washington, Sept. 9.—A report has been received at the state department showing to what extent the weaving industry has been followed in Japan. In 1896 there were 949,123 looms, with 1,042,866 persons engaged, of which 985,016 were women and girls. The value of the textile product for the year was $96,187,235, made up in part as follows: Silk textiles, $46,431,401; silk and cotton mixed, $10,281,272; cotton, $37,083,757; hemp, $2,021,467.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 9.—For the Michigan crop report for September correspondents secured from thrashers the results of 3,757 jobs, aggregating more than 65,000 acres of wheat thrashed, the yield from which was 1,091,483 bushels, an average of 16.73 bushels to the acre. LUETGERT'S BIG KNIFE.

Bloodstained Dirck He Gave to Mrs. Feldt When Arrested.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—The state expects to prove by expert testimony that the bones found in the vat in the Luetgert factory are human. Recent experiments made for the purpose of determining their character warrant this assertion.

Mrs. Feldt again took the witness-stand Wednesday and produced a blood-stained dirk knife which Luetgert gave her the day he was arrested. It was in the package containing $1,000. The knife is under examination by Dr. E. R. Le Count, who will testify that there is blood and flesh upon it.

Dr. Charles B. Gibson told the jury about the solution in the vat and stated that it would have disintegrated a human body in two and one-half hours.

An imitation tortoise shell hairpin was introduced in evidence. It is claimed that it was worn by Mrs. Luetgert the night she disappeared. It was found in the ashes taken from the furnace.

The alleged corset steels were produced and corset manufacturers swear that the bits of steel came from a corset.

Emma Schimpke testified to seeing the defendant in the alley back of the factory on the night of May 1, corroborating her sister and Nicholas Faber.

Dr. Carl Kline, Jr., testified that the tooth found under the vat is like one he put in an upper plate for Mrs. Luetgert.

The different finds made by the police were identified and introduced, then traced into the hands of the experts, who will tell of experiments made with them.

Luetgert declares that the knife is such as is carried by every sausage-maker and butcher and that he used it in cutting up meat.

Police Stop the Fight.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Police interference put an end to the Tommy Ryan-Kid McCoy fight in the fifth round here Wednesday night, when Ryan was doing the majority of the work and chasing McCoy all over the ring, inflicting a series of wicked inside uppercuts. Although by no means going, McCoy was having the worst of the contest when Inspector O'Brien rang the gong and Referee George Siler of Chicago sent the men to their corners and announced the bout a draw.

London, Sept. 9.—The Daily News' Berlin correspondent says it is alleged on the authority of reliable sources at St. Petersburg that no written alliance between France and Russia exists, and that not even a verbal treaty was made for the military convention was of an earlier date. Hanotaux that unless something of the sort was said the French ministry would be overthrown on President Faure's return to Paris.

To Eject Jones Island Folk.

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 9.—Deputy sheriffs Wednesday began the work of serving notices of ejectment on the 300 residents of Jones' island near the mouth of the Milwaukee river, in this city. The notices are the result of the attempt of the Illinois Steel company to obtain possession of the land on which these persons have lived for many years. The company claims they are squatters, but the attorneys who have been working on the case for the inhabitants of the island say that the "squatters" have as much title to the land as the corporation.

DID STRUBLE KILL HIMSELF?

Mystery of the Shepherd (Mich.) Bank May Be Solved.

Shepherd, Mich., Sept. 9.—Did Cashier Elmer E. Struble of the Farmers' bank commit suicide? Prosecuting Attorney McNamara says yes, it is said, and at the inquest, which opened Wednesday, will attempt to prove his theory correct. A mysterious "Frank Sutton" had been making deposits and drawing checks. This man is said to have been Elmer Struble himself. It was he who is alleged to have deposited the $500 and drawn the $1,000. The signature on the certificate of deposit and on the draft on the Jackson bank, so the story goes, was written by the now dead cashier in a disguised hand. This opinion is based upon the fact that the name of "Sutton" was spelled differently two different times and Jackson was also misspelled once. The papers have been submitted to an expert in Detroit, who gave an opinion that Struble wrote both.

NEGROES NEED LYNCHING

Booker T. Washington Not Wholly Against Mob Law in the South
Booker Washington, the colored orator who lectured at the Congressional church in this city last winter is reported as saying that he considers that the lynching evil will settle itself as time goes on, and that the class of negroes which are its victims are "invariably vagrants, men with out property or standing." There is certain grim justice in this but it comes better from Mr. Washington than it would from a white man. And it does not make the intrinsic offense of lawlessness any the less when it is exercised upon a worthless class of citizens.

A FALL BOOM IN BICYCLES

Jamesville Dealers Say That the Trade Shows an Unexpected Revival.

Dealers in bicycles report a boom in the business this fall. Many who have been holding off all summer, in the hope that cycles of all grades would be cheaper, are now purchasing. September and October are the two ideal cycling months, and the many purchases now are no doubt made with a view of taking advantage of this fact. Prices have been lowered but little, and those who are buying now are getting no particular advantage.

WILL HELP PAY Y.M.C.A. DEBTS

Woman's Auxiliary Funds Will All Go For This Purpose.

Members of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., will devote all obtainable funds in the future towards paying off the debt that now hangs over the association. This decision was reached at the annual meeting, the members deeming it wise to do this, rather than to spend further time and money in furnishing the building.

Mr. James E. Ferrell for Burnt House, W. Va., has discarded all other diarrhoea medicines and now handles only Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He has used it in his family and sold it to his customers for years, and has no hesitation in saying that it is the best remedy for colic and diarrhoea he has ever known. It not only gives relief, but effects a permanent cure. It is also pleasant and safe to take, making it an ideal remedy for bowel complaints. For sale by O. D. Stevens' Pharmacy, corner Main and Milwaukee streets.

CROPS IN COUNTY HAVE FARED WELL

YIELD OF CORN ABOUT UP TO AVERAGE.

An Immense Crop of Wheat, Flax, Rye and Tobacco—Sugar Beets Look Well—Pastures Dry and Short—Shrinkage in the Yield of Milk.

Reports from various parts of the county agree that corn as a rule is an average crop and is now out of danger. The hay crop was light, especially clover, which through the effect of winter killing yielded only about one-fourth of the usual amount and the seed crop is not more than half. Barley was somewhat light on the ground but the grain is fairly good, yielding from 20 to 30 bushels per acre. Winter wheat and rye did not come through the winter and the land was put to other crops. What little spring wheat there was yielded from 15 to 20 bushels and the quality is good. Flax, while it looks well on the ground, turns out from 8 to 12 bushels, a little more than one-half an average crop. Early potatoes are only fair, but the late planting is promising well. Sugar beets, planted from government seed for experimental trials look well but are yet small on account of the prevailing dry weather. The hogs and cows will be treated to apples this year.

Tobacco is simply immense, the largest and finest growth this year ever raised in this vicinity. The cool weather some time ago made the buckwheat crop the best seen in years. The pastures are dry and short, but the stock is not suffering, although milk cows are shrinking, according to the report of the creamery man. Oats very on different farms, and run from twenty to fifty bushels per acre. Where the yield is twenty bushels, the grain is shrunken and very inferior. It may seem somewhat strange why cats on adjoining farms should vary so much in yield and quality, and yet this is easy of solution. The early sown grain is almost invariably heavier and, the farmer who drains and prepares his land so that he can stretch the growing season five or ten days, gets a heavier crop, and puts his oats out of the way of rust, army worms and other insects.

KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

Buffalo Bill Has Pitched His Tents in All Lands.

Buffalo Bill's Wild West toured the world over, and pursued paths which led into strange climes and made strange contrasts. What the ghosts of the Roman gladiators must have thought when they saw the painted red men deploy upon the historic arena of the mighty Colosseum at Rome would make interesting reading. But not alone there were their tents pitched, for they followed the stream of history from the battle grounds of Fodden Field and Waterloo to Sedan and Sevastopol. They left the Rockies behind, they crossed the Alps and Pyrenees in the footsteps of Napoleon Bonaparte, and camped at the foot of the Caucasus. They personally paid proud but respectful tribute to the reigning monarchs of the world, and received in return the meed of praise due to unswerving loyalty and to brave deeds. And now, having gathered in his travels the representative native and primitive Rough Riders of the World, Buffalo Bill exhibits them all to his admiring countrymen in a most marvelous exhibition. The educational value of this exhibition need not be emphasized, for it is apparent that never again will there be such a concourse. Civilization has "wiped out" the buffalo, the Indians are reduced to a mere handful, the hardy pioneers, of whom Col Cody (Buffalo Bill) is the acknowledged chieftain, are beginning to watch the silvering of their locks by Father Time. This is an opportunity which no one should neglect, or he will regret it in the future.

In the morning there will be a free street cavalcade with detachments from every division enlivened with the bands of music, including the famous Buffalo Bill's Cowboy Band. The Wild West exhibition will appear here Tuesday Sept. 14.

Several letters of regret have been received from Milwaukee in regard to the failure to bring off the Milwaukee-Janesville match. The hope is held out that the return match can be played soon after the Wheaton and Okauchie tournaments. J. K. Hiley writes:

"Some of our players have been away a good deal this summer, and others are planning to go to Wheaton next week, so that it was simply impossible to get a team together at this time. Hope that it may only be deferred to a more convenient season and that we may have another pleasant meeting with you."

AUTUMN TENDENCIES.

The Breton Vest—Applique of Renaissance and Venetian Point Lace.

White silk petticoats, trimmed with ruffles of white mousseline de sole, on which are arranged bands of very narrow black velvet ribbon, are a novelty in underwear. These narrow black velvet bands are to be much employed upon autumn toilets, being placed around the foot of skirts, and also as bordering for narrow, scant ruffles of taffeta, which will form a trimming for cloth skirts up to midway of their length. To be correct according to the mode, the taffeta must be of the exact shade of the cloth.

Another novelty for cloth costumes is the breton vest, which will be worn this fall, and yokes likewise of various styles. Applications of white or yellowish lace will be greatly used, guipure, renaissance laces, point de venise and all varieties having a heavy pattern and large openings being chosen. Applications of velvet motifs, covered with yellow or white lace, are also a feature of the trimming of cloth costumes, the motifs being outlined by a cord of some kind.

There is no special news as yet with regard to silks. The same varieties will continue to be worn until the end of autumn, taffetas giving place to broche silks and new stripes.

Black and white felt hats are to be in great favor as cold weather approaches. Light and bright tinted felts of all colors will enjoy popularity, especially gray ones trimmed with gray ostrich plumes and velvet flowers. Groups of plumes have been frequently seen on summer hats, particularly in black and in white, and are an indication of what may be expected later on, when erect clusters will be placed at the very back of the hat or at one side.

An illustration is given of an effective autumn costume of light sable cloth. The bodice is outlined with rows of stitching, with which the foot of the skirt is also bordered. On each side of the bodice are arranged cloth straps of graduated sizes, edged with gold cord and fastened by gold buttons. The short, close bodice is trimmed with gold cords and buttons and has a vest and double revers of white moire. The full chemise is of blue mousseline de sole. The close, plain sleeves have a slight fullness at the top and are finished at the wrist by stitched points. The neck and sleeve frills are of white lace. A hat of blue straw, trimmed with blue gauze and blue flowers, completes the costume.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

THE INDIANA WAY.

In order to find that women have not the right to vote under the present law the supreme court of Indiana has been compelled to reverse itself. Indeed within three years it has reversed itself three times on this most perplexing woman question—first, in admitting women to the practice of law it holds that the express use of the word "male" in the constitution is no bar to the female; second, in interpreting the right of women to sell liquor the same court holds that the express use of the word "male" is a bar to the right of a female; third, in the right to vote the court holds that by the express mention of the male the female is barred from suffrage. Truly the way of justice is hard in Indiana.—Union Signal.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

1087—William the Conqueror died at Hermandade, a village near Rouen; born at Falaise, Normandy, 1027.
1250—Battle of Poitiers; Edward the Black Prince, with 8,000 men, defeated 30,000 French.
1513—Battle of Flodden; James IV of Scotland, 39 of his nobles and 10,000 of his men were slain.
1850—President Fillmore signed the act admitting California as a state. California narrowly missed becoming an English colony. The American flag was hoisted at Monterey in the face of British vessels whose mission in the harbor was to set up some form of protectorate. In this the British were anticipated by Lieutenant John C. Fremont, who conquered northern California while the Mexican war was in progress.
1870—Rev. Dr. Nathan Lord, president of Dartmouth college, died at Hanover, N. H.; born 1817.
1894—General P. S. Levin, a Union veteran, died in Toledo, O.; born 1822.
1896—Ex-United States Senator Henry B. Payne of Ohio, died at Cleveland; born 1810.

TWO YEARS ON THE FARM.

"How does the farmer profit by the tariff?" democratic orators used to ask. The question never bothered sensible farmers, for they knew that when mills, factories and workshops were running on full time, the market for beef, potatoes, flour and chickens showed it. A fresh demonstration of the effect of trade revival on farm prices has been just given. Assistant Secretary Brigham of the department of agriculture, has prepared the following table, showing the increase in prices of farm products this year over those of the corresponding period in 1896:

	1896.	1897.
Butter, creamery, per pound.....	$0.15	$0.18
Butter, dairy.....	.07	.10
Cheese.....	.07½	.09
Eggs.....	.10½	.11
Hides, per pound.....	.04½	.08½
Rye, per bushel.....	.30½	.50
Oats.....	.16½	.23
Wheat.....	.61	.93½
Corn.....	.24	.32
Hogs, per cwt.....	3.25	4.40
Potatoes, per barrel.....	.90	2.10
Sheep, each.....	3.10	3.35
Lambs, each.....	4.25	5.05

These are Cincinnati figures in all cases and the proportion is therefore evenly maintained. The figures furnish interesting food for reflection and interfere sadly with Mr. Bryan's "silver and wheat" proposition.

GREAT PROSPECTS.

It is not alone in agricultural products that the foreign trade of the United States is greatly expanding. Our manufacturers are ever gaining upon products of the farm. In 1892 the agricultural products formed 78.69 per cent of the whole, and manufactured goods 15.61 per cent. In 1897 the agricultural percentage was 66.27, and manufactured goods 26.78. In 1895 the exports of manufacturers amounted to $228,571,178, and in 1879 to $276,357,861. It is a great showing for our factories as well as our farms.

In making many forms of machinery this country is admitted to have no equal. Our agricultural machines, electric appliances, sewing machines and bicycles are known everywhere, and lead the market. Many other manufactured articles could be named that have reached the same distinction.

Our total exports last year crossed the billion dollar mark. The business men of the United States are facing a great future, and they will be equal to it unless crippled by wild financiers and demagogues.

WHERE HAS IT GONE?

Has anybody noticed the sudden decline of the Russian thistle? That redoubtable weed which a few years ago was said to threaten the annihilation of American agriculture was lost to view very soon after its failure to serve as a basis for appropriations. On the other hand, the gypsy moth, which was successfully used to raid the treasury in Massachusetts, is in a highly flourishing condition and was good this year for a $10,000 pull at the public funds. A brave start was made with the Russian thistle but legislatures declined to go into the business of killing weeds and the country has survived in good shape.

The comptroller of the United States unites with shrewd observers of the financial situation elsewhere in predicting international independence for this most progressive and prosperous of nations. Commercial and government reports for the week and season show a gain in volume of trade and prices of products as encouraging as it is significant of a great increase of both in near weeks.

The duty collected on the personal baggage of passengers returning from Europe during the month of August, in excess of $100 each, amounted to $46,892. The duty falls on a class of people who can well afford to pay and who never should have been exempt.

The silver folly will be smashed for good this fall and business will be benefited, prosperity enhanced, the outlook brightened in every direction and the political atmosphere cleared. A free coinage platform has been put forward again in Iowa, Nebraska, Kentucky, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Virginia, and one will be adopted in Massachusetts. Its defeat should be overwhelming. There is strong hope that Nebraska will return to the party of prosperity and of the dollar that goes at its face value all over the world. Heavier majorities for sound money will reduce what is left of the free coinage scheme to mere political debris. It is moving in that direction now, day by day.

The money Mr. Bryan gets for his speeches shows that it is hard, even for him, to wriggle out of the stream of prosperity.

Mascagni takes Poison.
New York, Sept. 9.—A dispatch to the World from London says: "Mascagni, the brilliant composer of the opera 'Cavalleria Rusticana,' has attempted to commit suicide at Bologna, Italy, by taking poison. The attempt is said to have failed, but Mascagni's mind is unhinged, it is asserted, and he must be placed under control."

Snow Falls at Butte, Mont.
Butte, Mont., Sept. 9.—Snow fell here for several hours Wednesday forenoon. The weather was quite cold, though the snow melted almost as fast as it fell.

HOT RACE WAS WON BY HINBERT WILKES

JANESVILLE HORSE MADE A GAME STRUGGLE.

Red Strath Put Up the Hardest Battle, and Took One Heat, Getting Second Place in Two Others—The Story of the Four Miles.

Hinbert Wilkes, the speedy Janesville pacer owned by Soverhill & Porter, made a game fight in the $800 race in St. Paul. There were seven starters, but it was not till the eighth mile that they got away with Frank Potts in the rear, ten lengths at least, the others in line. Hinbert Wilkes was the first to show in front with Red Strath and Bashaw Clark in attendance; these held fairly together till the top turn, when Hinbert, who had lost the lead at the last half, came like a flash and shot into the stretch in the lead, winning easily in 2:14. For the second place Red Strath and Bashaw Clark made a flinging finish with Red Leaf coming fast behind them and driving Clark off his feet to a bad break that made him fifth, behind Don Payne. The distance was waived on account of Potts' bad start.

In the second heat of the pacers the go was given with Don Payne away back of the rest in line, but all quite uncertain of the word. Hinbert Wilkes went out of the turn in the lead, with Red Strath trailing him closely. On the stretch, the horses began to bunch up and it looked like a horse race of three at least, but though he took the lead he could not maintain the clip and fell back, rounding the top turn. Wilkes and Red Strath seemed to have it to themselves, but Doc Archibald came at a terrific gait and seemed to have speed enough to win out but he faltered at the distance and fell back.

Red Strath, magnificently driven by Bill Mathews, (the same old Bill) won, fairly lifted into the lead at the finish by half a length from Hinbert Wilkes, Archibald third, Frank Potts fourth, Bashaw Clark fifth, Don Payne sixth, and Red Leaf last with Archibald very lame. Time 2:13.

In the third heat Archibald was drawn on account of lameness, still leaving six to contest and yet they could get no closer together on the score than a field of a dozen. There evidently was a desire on the part of all to get off advantageously. At the third score they got off to the best start of the day. Red Strath broke badly on the turn, letting Frank Potts go into the stretch in front, closely pressed by Red Leaf, with Hinbert Wilkes a poor third. Mathews got Red Strath down to business, and began to close up a good big gap, passing up steadily. Potts could not maintain the pace that Red Leaf and Hinbert Wilkes were now cutting out for each other, and those two drew into the straight together; Red Strath still came on gamely, but Mathews, finding pursuit hopeless, contented himself by taking third place easily. Potts fourth. Time, 2:16. Summary:

For the fourth and last heat of the pacing race, they were sent to a moderate start, at the third score. Hinbert Wilkes took the lead, trailed by Red Strath, and these positions were maintained to the end, Potts getting third place. Time, 2:13. Summary:

MISS PRATT WANTS $10,000 DAMAGES

FELL ON A MILWAUKEE STREET
SIDEWALK.

Accident That Happened About Two Years Ago, Gives Rise to Civil Proceedings—Papers Served on Mayor Thoroughgood Today—Case May Be Tried This Fall.

Ten thousand dollars is asked by Miss Ella V. Pratt from the city of Janesville for injuries sustained by falling on a defective sidewalk. Fethers, Jeffris, Fifeid and Moust as attorneys for the plaintiff today served papers on Mayor Thoroughgood. The case, it is said, will be tried at the fall term of court.

The complaint alleges that July 14, 1895 at 9:30 p. m. Miss Pratt was thrown violently so the ground as the result of a defective stone sidewalk that faced the Armory block on West Milwaukee street. Her left knee cap was fractured, it is alleged, and the muscles, tendons and ligaments have ever since given her great pain.

The plaintiff in the case resides at 208 North Bluff street, and is the daughter of Thomas Pratt.

A FAST GAME OF BASE BALL

Michael Birmingham Gets Much Glory in Brockton—Score 1 to 0.

Sixteen hundred people saw the most remarkable game of the season played by the Brockton and Newport teams of the New England league, last week. The score was 1 to 0 in favor of Brockton, and Michael Birmingham of this city, was the bright, particular star.

The game lasted only 75 minutes, a remarkably brief time for the playing of nine full innings, and it was full of brilliant and dashing plays. The pitching was of the headiest and cleverest kind, the fielding clean and sharp, and no blundering dull or apathetic work marred the occasion at any time. Time after time a single break, a moment's hesitation or a misplay would have changed the whole aspect of the game, but the fielders kept at their work undauntedly, solved every problem but one unerringly, and made the game one that will be historic. The Brockton Enterprise says:

The altitudinous Michael Birmingham, the India rubber man of New England base ball, worked as though life itself were at stake. He accepted eighteen chances and he was a dead sure trap for every ball that came anywhere near first base. He was mixed up in double play with Gochanur and he was responsible for a triple play that probably saved the game for the Brocktons. As the Enterprise has said before Birmingham is playing the fastest ball of his career about this time and yesterday was a Star Pointer exhibition day for that speed.

"In the seventh Brockton went out in order. Newport was a dangerous factor in this inning, Pickett, first up, drew a base on balls. Mills sent him to second with a single that Sheekard stopped but could not handle. Then came the fielding play of the day. Crisham drove a hot liner toward right and the men on bases started to run. But they had reckoned without Birmingham, who jumped in front of the ball, squeezed it and stepped on first, catching Mills, and then turning threw to second, where Sheekard was waiting for the ball with Pickett vainly struggling to get back from third. Thus a triple play was effected, and the side retired, and again the crowd went wild. The bleachers were a mass of waving hats in an instant, and few were the women in the grand stand who didn't wave their handkerchiefs, while everybody cheered and screamed, and Birmingham owned the towel."

OUR FALL OVERCOATINGS

GILLIAD MOON'S SPECULATION.

By E. S. GRANT.

[Copyright, 1897, by the Author.]

The evening sunlight, slanting athwart the waters, glistened like a thousand flakes of silver, but down in the shadow of the mountains, with the beetling crags and the tangled leather wood brakes along the banks, Kanawha river looked but what it was—a wild, rough stream, half muddy and half clear from the nature of its tributaries, the New river and the Granley, which flow into each other about two miles above the falls. Its surface looks smooth enough, but it possesses an undercurrent as swift as a whirlpool. Gilliad Moon brought his small boat down on the muddy side, and when he reached a certain briery landing he pulled ashore and hid his boat among the iron weeds which grew to the water's edge. Then, followed by his dogs, he walked up the path which led to his house under the threatening rocks of the mountain. There was to be a war in his house. One by one his 12 children had scattered about and died. Only Laney was left, and Gilliad was fond of her. She was preparing his meager supper of fried fish and griddle cakes. She was a pretty girl, or would have been pretty if tidy. She wore a short cotton dress turned up over a striped balmoral after the fashion of the Scotch fishwives, only her clothes were dull and shabby in coloring and texture, and there was an utter absence of the picturesque. She was thin and pale, and a frown of discontent, an unusual thing for Laney, darkened her face. Gilliad entered the open door, and, placing his gun across the wooden pegs on the wall, flung down before the girl a huge spotted wildcat. "Thar," he said. "See that varment, gal? Waal, thet'll fetch a clean two dollar, so git yer stumps clear'd erway an hope me skin 'im."

"Ewh!" ejaculated Laney. "An thet's her critter I hear'n thet dorgs arter?"

The slim yellow cur and the bob tailed, plug eared bulldog, faithful followers of their master, wagged heads and strutted about as if conscious of a victory.

The man took his knives and whetstone from a box and went to the door stone, where he seated himself to sharpen them.

Laney fried the griddle cakes, and the pungent odor of the bacon rind, with which she greased the skillet, floated out upon the evening air and mingled with the dampness from the dripping rocks above the house.

"Did ye hear anything erbout ther party at Shady?" asked Laney as she set the one cracked plate upon the table and motioned for Gilliad to eat.

"Naw, an I didn' ax nothin erbout et," he replied.

"Taddy Green air a-comin fur ter tek me up thar in his dugout," said the girl. "But I kain't go 'thout no shews."

"Ye kin stay et home 'thout 'em, then," said Gilliad.

Laney flashed an angry glance at him from beneath her frowny hair. She looked up the river and saw the white buildings of the hotel and store gleaming in the evening sun. If she only had some money, she could purchase shoes from the store on her way to Shady in the dugout, and she would be as well equipped for the "shindig" as the city girls were for the gay balls at the hotel. At least she would be satisfied.

Laney watched the cloud of mist float up from the rivers, where they came together and dashed and broke into spray over the falls. She was silent a moment. Then, as she turned to the work of skinning the wildcat, she said firmly:

"I air a-goin ter ther party, an ye ort'er gin me a par o' shews er money ter git 'em with."

"I ort, ort I?" responded her father as he slashed his long knife through the tough hide which Laney held.

"I dunno why ye kain't, pap'y," she said, and the tears gathered in her dull eyes.

She had never been refused before, because she had never made such a request. "Ye dunno, eh?" sneered the old man.

"Waal, ef ye tell me whar ter git it, I'll gin it ter yer."

"Out o' thet box thar," said Laney boldly.

"It has got nothin whutsumever in it," snapped the man, "an I warn ye and raised the bloody knife menacingly at her. He glared from his deep set eyes, with their grizzled lashes, like a maniac. Laney crouched at his feet. Her unkempt hair glistened in the firelight. A moment he stood over her with the dripping knife. His stiff white hair and long beard bristled, his humped shoulders were drawn back, and his horny hand threatened her life.

Up in the mountains, deep in its recess of gray rock, fringed stories by lichens and big ferns that crinkled and dried in the wind, is an Indian spring. The water is deadly poison. An old story relates that a tribe there passed in their march, in all the glory of savage war paint, bent upon the destruction of a nobler race, and passed and camped and died. The venom in Gilliad Moon's eyes was as deadly as the waters of the mountain spring. Laney crouched before it and crouched upon her bare feet. While he stood there a thought came to him that of all the poor creatures with whom his life had been linked here was the dearest. He was about to strike down the only living thing that he loved. Gilliad Moon had saved himself from developing into a veritable human vampire by that very love for Laney. Strike her? No! He had never yet laid his rough hand upon her in anger. His arm dropped to his side.

"Ef ye uvver do watch me again," he said with a quivering voice, "ef ye uvver do, I'll lay hands on ye, shore. I'll tar ye inter threads o' whit leather an feed ye ter the devil's buntin dorg."

The old man's face settled into its stolid scowl, and he resumed his work. The two dogs stood by, snapping occasionally at each other, and greedy for the blood. The knife glittered as he flashed it before the fire.

"I know'd ye hed money," said Laney sullenly. "Taddy Green sed es how ther ingineer showed a pile o' money ter some un et ther falls ther varry day he was drowned."

"Thadeous Green gut thet money, then, ef he knows so much erbout it," said Gilliad.

"I seed ye git it," persisted Laney. "an ef ye don' gin me 'nuff fur a par o' shews I'll tell on ye."

"Ye dassent," said Gilliad, with an ugly smile. "What d'ye want wit' shoes ennyhow? Ye uvver hev hed enny yit. Thet'll confine yer feet so's ye kain't walk."

She tossed her head and sneered at his arguments. The frown on her face grew darker.

"Ye kin do es ye air a min ter, pappy, but ef yer want me ter stay here et home an dredge fur ye es I hes did sense mammy died ye'll hev ter shew me. I air too big er gal ter be goin bar'foot afore folks."

"Stay at home," said the old man sullenly. "Kain't blame ye ef ye go bar'foot et home."

"I'll leave ye an hire out like a nigger," said Laney. "I uvver did hev a haight fur ter buy close wit', an I air jis' tired o' dredgin fur nothin."

"Ye air got yer head turned ther wrang way, like a whoot owl's, scart out o' his hole in ther daytime. Ye air a thinkin ter pattern arter them hum-backed gals what comes ter ther hotel, an ye min me. I say, ef I ketches ye a doin ennythin fur them, er up thar fur enny cause whutsumever in the least, I'll git me a bunch o' rope an larrup ye uvver step ter this cabin. Ye hear? Now ye min me ef ye want a home. Ef ye don' want no home here, jis' light out es soon es ye air a min ter. Ye don' hope me narry haight. Me an ther dorgs kin git on fine 'thout ye."

Gilliad Moon then stalked out of the house.

Laney squatted by the fire where she had held the carcass of the wildcat, rested her chin in her hands and looked out at the evening sky. Her thin face seemed to grow longer in the twilight. Her eyes brightened and brimmed over, and the tears rained down her cheeks. She heard her father's footsteps descend the hardened path and die away in the distance. She shuddered. Then she noiselessly crept toward the greasy old box in the corner.

It was not all stolen money in the box. Since she was a little girl Gilliad had been contributing to its contents. She would not have touched one of those shiny coins or water soaked notes she had seen from the cliff for all the world put together. The top of the box had served in turn as washstand, meat block, bread board and kitchen table. It was now piled with a nondescript heap of rubbish, and the front of it was fastened firmly with a rusty padlock. But, with the opportunity that makes the thief, Laney had cut the leather hinges on the lid, and she now lifted it.

At the bottom of the box she found an old yarn sock—colored blue when her mother lived and set a blue pot—and stowed away in the sock was money. It was lumpy and heavy. It was but one of the many stuffed socks in the old box, but it was the only one she had seen, and it contained more than she thought she could ever spend. She lifted it from the moldy old ropes and rubbish and weighed it in her hand. She was trembling from head to foot. She went forward into the firelight and, squatting down, poured out the money in her lap.

The fire flickered and crackled. The wind outside whistled through the cleft rocks and stirred among the iron weeds. The river moaned as it beat and lashed itself on the shoals. Laney crouched in the cabin and listened. A crunching step on the path startled her. She caught up her dress and went to the door. She peered out into the now dusky evening. A pallid western light through a break in the mountains showed where the sun had set. No one was near. Only a fearless whippoorwill, perched on the panel of rail fence, swayed himself back and forth and whistled softly, warningly. She had heard the same notes while she stood on the cliff and watched her father rob the bloated corpse. She turned shudderingly into the cabin and took up a handful of the money from her lap. She hoped it was not the same, and the temptation to take it was great.

Suddenly she shrank back with superstitious horror, for she saw blood stains upon her hands. Poor Laney! She had quite forgotten that she had handled the wildcat. She groaned in pitiful terror while she replaced the money in the box and piled the rubbish upon it. Her conscience had suffered a wound, for she had been in the act of theft. She berated herself for it as she brushed up the hearth and put the cabin to rights. But she had conquered. She had not yielded to her momentary weakness, and she had recovered all the quicker from the fright.

"It air mos' time fur Thadeous," she said, "an I mus' hurry up an git my clo's on so's not to keep 'im waitin'."

She brought forth from behind the bed and robed herself in a yellow calico skirt ruffled and furbelowed with bands of purple calico. She put on an ill fitting basque of gray alpaca, faded about the neck and bursting at the seams, and which had neither hooks and eyes nor buttons upon it. But she lapped it over and pinned it with red thorns, point over point, like a fence row. She combed her hair and fastened a greasy ribbon at the end of her braids, and then she went to the river to wash her feet.

"Ef I did hev shews now, I'd think a heap o' myself," she said with a little sob as she placed her white, shapely feet upon a rock and waited for them to dry. Soon the splash of Thadeous Green's oars caused her to go down the sandy path and meet him.

Laney was usually gay and chatty with the young man, but he soon observed that something was wrong with her, and he questioned her as to the cause. The small boat plowed its way up the stream. The stars came out, and the milky way, stretching from one bristling mountain top to another, shed a pale light down on the black waters. By the time they reached the store, near where they would have to land, the young legman had discovered the principal reason for Laney's distress.

He resolved to prove himself worthy of the trust he had asked her, and when they walked up the mountain gorge which led to Mooley's cabin in Shady Laney wore a pair of stiff leather shoes, and, better still, a soft, warm crocheted shawl, which Thadeus had generously purchased at the store. She was never so happy in her life. She forgot that her father had ordered her from his house. She forgot that there was anything in the world to be sorry for, and she rattled over the stony path triumphantly in her shoes. When they reached a level on top of the mountain, they passed through a small wood of belted trees. The mist from the roaring falls below drifted up, and the full red moon, turning around the cliff, cut long funnel shaped roads through the mists and the naked woods with her beams.

Thadeus guided the girl, and they came suddenly into a clearing, where the trees had all been cut from the blackened stumps and rolled down the mountain, and they were in Shady.

The name was as inappropriate as possible. It was a barren hilltop. The river wound about its base like a silvery snake. Mooley's cabin was before them, and they soon reached the open door.

What a whirl and cloud were inside the four walls of the cabin! Girls' calico dresses aflutter, boys' cowskin boots astomp! Essence of cinnamon mingled with the perfume of sweetest wild flowers afloat in the air!

"Come right in!" called Isaac Mooley as he spied Thadeus. "Come on an lead out."

Taking Laney's hand, the young fellow sailed down the puncheon floor between the rows of girls and boys, and with many a hearty kick of his boots proceeded to turn partners, while the crowd sang in lusty tones:

Ther boys dig an scratch,
Ther gals knit an patch;
We'll all live together
In ther sweetentater patch,
An we'll chase ther bufferlow—
Yes, we'll chase ther bufferlow—
Oh, we'll chase—ther—buf-fer-low!

Gilliad Moon sat on the river bank and smoked his cob pipe with as much satisfaction as if he expected to have Laney to quarrel with in the morning. The muddy waters of the Kanawha washed along the rocks, and the moon lighted up the opposite shore. Neither moonshine nor sunshine ever touched his cabin. For that reason he had tacked the skin of the wildcat on the smooth trunk of the sycamore tree, where the sun could shine upon it through a rift in the mountains.

Gilliad was as comfortable as he had ever been while engaged in honest pursuits. His plug eared bulldog lay by the side of him and the pup was prowling about the greasy skillet in the cabin, while the door stood open and the fire adied built in the ashes.

He had built a fire under the wash kettle, and the acrid odor which issued from the bubbling contents stamped them at once to the knowing mountaineer as wildcat. Old Gilliad would undoubtedly have told a prying stranger that he was boiling it for his dog. It smelled good. He held his nose away from his cob pipe to get a full whiff of the savory steam.

The fire blazed fitfully. The kettle sizzled and boiled low.

Gilliad took up a burning torch and

SPECULATION.

peered, by its light, into the stew. He prodded the meat with his jackknife, but, finding it still tough, he dipped more water from the river and poured over it. Filling his pipe, he sat down for another long smoke.

Toward morning he discovered the meat to be quite tender.

Getting his cracked plate, he filled it with white slices from the cat's plump hams, and, garnished with spearmint and cold griddle cakes, Gilliad made a hearty breakfast as the sun peeped over the tangled brush on Big Sewel mountain.

The dogs also had a good meal from the stringy fragments which Gilliad threw down in the sand for them.

Still another service was the dead cat destined to perform. When the soup was cold, Gilliad brought forth a gourd and carefully skimmed the lard from the top of it.

"It air ther varry best ile I uvver hev seed fur rheumatiz," he told his dogs. "Wildket ile air ther. I think I kin sell this fur cash at ther falls, fur it air amazin curible ile. It air ther varry thing fur 'Kiptin Hines' foot, an I'll tek it up ter him terday while it's fresh."

He met with a lively reception at the falls. Old Gilliad was known to be the best informed man along the river about the dangerous undercurrent, and the deep caverns, and the sunken rocks.

When his boat came up that morning, it was met by many others, and the entire little settlement had turned out in the distressing search for a drowned woman. One of the lady guests at the hotel had been out boating and had been thrown out under the roaring falls.

"Thar's Gilliad's Moon," said a man upon seeing him. "Ef he kain't find her, nobuddy kin."

So to Gilliad Moon the heartbroken husband fled.

"Air yer willin ter gin anything?" asked the old man, while his keen eyes glistened at the prospect of a big reward.

"Fifty dollars."

"I'll git her ef ther dern mud kets don't eat her up," said Gilliad as he turned his boat around and rowed down stream again.

He returned to his cabin and hunted up his many different grasp hooks. He put new ropes where the knotty old ones were rotten, and with his long trusty pole—the same with which he prodded the engineer's swollen face—he set out in his boat to hunt for the lost woman. Along the bank the sumac bushes blazed with autumn beauty and nodded over the turbulent stream.

Night came. Lights glimmered from the skiffs of the searchers, but they were all above Gilliad. An occasional shout from one of them caused an oath from Gilliad when he thought some one had found the body. But the night search was vain.

The next day it rained, but Gilliad went out in the dense fog and paddled about.

After awhile Thaddeus Green came down on a raft of logs which he was taking to market and stopped for a chat with Gilliad.

"How's Laney?" he bashfully inquired as he started.

"I hain't seen her sence ye taken her tather night ter ther shindig," Gilliad replied, feeling very mean over his quarrel with her.

"Why, she sed she were a-comin by herself in the boat," said Thaddeus. Some o' ther boys got boozey, an me an Isaac Mooley hed ter fetch 'em home, an Laney sed she wasn't goin ter stay thar in ther fuss, an she'd come home in ther dugout. I hope nothin's happened ter her?"

"Oh, I reckon nothin's a-happened," said Gilliad. He felt guilty and mean for telling her to "light out" from his home. "I reckon she hes stopped over et ther falls. She's a gre't hankerin arter them city folks et ther hotel."

"When she do kem home," said Thaddeus, "I'll be down ter see her. I hain't nudder axed ye, but Uncle Gilliad—but I air a-goin ter marry Laney."

Gilliad Moon only gave a grant of consent, and the raft careened and then went floating down the stream with the lank young fellow standing upon it. It was two days later that Gilliad came upon the object of his search. It was yet dark, and the cold winds, reeking with frosts, had soaked his clothes and driven him off the river. He was about to land, when, there, almost at his door, partly hidden in the sand, weeds and jagged rocks of the shoals, he discovered the body of a woman. It had evidently risen in the night, inflated with gas, from some deep cavern under the muddy water. Reaching down, he grasped it by the foot and tried to lift it up.

"Fifty dollar air not so much es a haight fur ther work I hev did," said he to himself, "an I ain't no min ter tek less then a hundred fur it, now I got it."

He did not examine the body, for it was growing light, and he did not wish to be discovered. Hardened and avaricious as he was, he dared not look at the dead face. There was always something in the face of the dead that reproached Gilliad Moon to his callous heart. He never voluntarily looked upon the dead.

Not far from his cabin a small creek had cut its way through the mountain under rocks and now flowed with quite an ostentatious volume into the river. Gilliad Moon slipped a loop of rope about the waist of the woman, and, getting into his boat, towed it up stream to the mouth of the creek. He sprang out upon a shelf of rock when he had towed his ghastly burden about 100 yards of the creek, and, leaning over, he swung it by the rope well down into the deepest water and tied the end of the rope securely to the roots of a tree.

That day at the falls he saw the grief stricken husband and child of the lost woman. The little one stood by him on the bank of the river which held such fascination for them and clutched his horny hand for a moment. What a thrill that innocent touch sent to the gnarled old heart! But the steam and weather stained countenance of Gilliad betrayed not his secret.

At length the reward was increased, trebled, and old Gilliad went forth from his lonesome hut to restore the hidden body. His crazy little craft went cruising along the river banks, apparently in great unconcern. Some fishermen were near, and it was a long time before he could secure his treasure.

When at last he hurried up the hollow, it was as the midday sun blazed down on the creek. He proceeded to lift and cut the cord that held his ghastly speculation.

"Hello, Uncle Gilliad!" said a voice at his back. "What hev ye thar?"

The old man turned sharply, and there stood Laney's beau.

"Dern ye!" he muttered between his yellow teeth. "Dern ye, whut did ye kem fur?"

"Oh, I see, ye've got er prize," said Thaddeus, laughing. There was no help for it. Gilliad confided in Laney's beau and offered to share the reward for silence.

"By jingo," said Green when Gilliad finished, "ye air snowed this time shore. Ther woman's done been found two mile below here. I seed 'em tek'n."

"Then who in God's name hev I got here?" interrupted Gilliad Moon, while a gray pallor crept up into his leathery cheeks. Thaddeus bent over the rock and lifted out and laid upon the sand the shiny, bursting body of—Laney.

THE END.

Wellington and Napoleon.

There are some interesting stories in the recently published reminiscences of Mr. Corbould, the drawing master to Queen Victoria's children. Here is one of them: "On reaching the palace one morning the Prince of Wales showed me a drawing he had just finished. Napoleon was depicted on horseback leveling a pistol at the Duke of Wellington, who was advancing to cut down his great enemy. While I was looking at the drawing, who should come in but the duke himself. 'Why, the very man who can best criticize my drawing!' cried the prince. 'Now, can you tell me who that is on the left?' he went on, presenting the sketch to the duke. 'Well,' replied the latter deliberately, 'judging from the waistcoat and the cocked hat, I should say it was meant for Napoleon.' 'Right,' said the prince. 'And who is the other figure?' 'By the cut of the jib,' returned the duke calmly, 'I should say it was myself.' 'Right again,' said the prince, 'the drawing accurate? That's what I want to know.' The duke rose, put down the sketch and thus impressively addressed the Prince of Wales: 'My boy, I'm going to tell you something that the English people don't seem to realize. I was sent out to keep Napoleon in check, but never in my life have I set eyes on him. Once, in the midst of a battle, some one cried: 'Look! There's Napoleon!' But before I could get the glass to my eye the smoke from a field gun had enveloped him."

The Lubrication Test.

Very few of the millions of people who carry watches realize to what a wonderful extent lubrication is developed and what an extraordinary number of turns the balance wheel makes with one oiling. A Chestnut street watchmaker, whose knowledge of these wonderful pieces of mechanism is not exceeded by any man in this city, has made up an interesting table of comparison to show the perfection of lubrication in a watch.

A watch will run on one oiling from a year to a year and a half. Every minute the balance wheel turns on its axis 450 times and 27,000 times in an hour. Accepting a year as the time the ordinary watch will run with one oiling, he finds that if the driver of a locomotive was as well oiled as a balance wheel of a watch it ought to run 60 miles an hour day and night for 648 days, or well on to two years, with one oiling. In that time it would traverse a distance equal to nearly 40 times the circumference of the earth.

In view of the fact that in reality few locomotives will run one day without reoiling, he maintains that the watchmaker has developed his art to a far greater degree than the locomotive builder has yet been able to reach.—Philadelphia Record.

Gold and Grease.

Some years ago the mint authorities of a certain city noticed that a small amount of gold was missing every day after the coining operations were over.

They watched and set traps of every description, but no thief was detected, and after the loss had continued with regularity for some months they set it down to an extra amount of unavoidable waste and thought no more about it.

Two or three years afterward two brothers, who were working there, left and set up a public house together on money which they said had been left them by an uncle. As they had both good characters, it was not until one of them told a mint foreman, on the understanding that no action should be taken, that anything was known of the following trick:

Both the brothers used to grease their hands before working at the machines, and whenever they noticed some gold dust sticking to the grease it was wiped off in their hair. Care was used that enough was not taken to show, though when they washed their hair at home each night the few grains meant several extra shillings, which ultimately enabled them to retire and live comfortably.—Strand Magazine.

Good Printing...

Is like good painting—it demands and obtains a second glance. The second glance leads to thought about and knowledge of the thing portrayed, and then on to the artist or advertiser.

The kind of printing as well as the kind of painting that it pays to do and to have done is that which obtains this "second glance." Plenty of the other kind!

We are PRINTERS. Our work obtains glances of admiration, and thus leads on to the end desired. We don't do the "other kind." Put our job room to the test.

A Little More Cost Brings Big Profits.

The addressing, folding, inclosing, sealing and stamping of five thousand circulars, with postage, will cost at least $65, whether the circular is good or bad. Notwithstanding this fixed charge, some strive to save a dollar or two on the cost of printing, although the goods advertised are to be judged by the character of the printing, just as a house is judged by the character of its salesmen. Good printing costs but little more, and that "little more" brings greater returns than any other part of the cost. Order your printing where good work is assured.
